THE HOME PAPER

SAY!

(By CHARLES J. ARNOLD)

Because of the weather conditions the official opening of the straw hat season — May 15 — was not as "strawpicious" as it might have been. A few of the boys blossomed out with their "straws" a few days prior to the official date, but were driven to cover by the wintry blasts of May 15. According to the calendar it is all right to wear a straw hat any time you want to now, however.

Society Note—Among the Greencastle people who attended the reception given in Cadle Tabernacle, in Indianapolis, Tuesday night, in honor of Mr. Chuck Wiggins, were Mr. E. B. Taylor, Mr. Richard Taylor, Mr. Roy Christie and Mr. Harold Talbott. All report a quiet, enjoyable evening. The only complaint registered was that the cold drinks, served by the accompanying refreshment boys were entirely too warm, and that the prize fight scheduled between Mr. Wiggins and a fellow named "Joe" proved to be more of a wrestling match.

Spring has come and went again. Weather is quite chilly. Those who changed to undies thin. Now realize 'twas silly.

Though flannels itch when weather's warm. This advice I'd deliver. Don't taken off, too soon—just scratch. You'd better itch than shiver.

For reasons best known to myself the Kentucky Derby will have to get along this spring, without my assistance. For, although my heart will be in the paddock, my feet will be here.

A friend asked me this morning if I was going to continue my campaign of propaganda against the court house sidewalks. And my answer was "yes". It sure looks like I had a life time job ahead of me.

"Save the women and children first," was the cry of Harry Wells, of the Central National bank, when he and some other Greencastle men, who had attended a card club meeting at the Country Club, discovered a big gray Owl, which was just about to make way with a mother robin and her little ones. Immediately a battle line was formed and the men attacked old Mr. Owl driving him away from the robin's nest and then, just to make sure that it would not make another attack on the robin they killed Mr. Owl.

About the only fellows who I have ever seen smiling during the past two days, have been the coal dealers. It was funny to see the expression of joy on their faces as compared with the expressions of sorrow on the straw hat dealers. But cheer up, folks. It will be warm enough in July and August.

I would suggest to some of these candidates for county commissioner that the people of Greencastle are desirous of having the sidewalks around the court house removed. And the country folks too, are anxious to have more parking space in Greencastle.

The Vandalia station at Fillmore is to be "officially" closed. Judging from the report of the railroad which shows receipts of $654.39 for seven months in 1929, the station has been "technically" closed for some time.

JUNIOR-SENIOR ANNUAL AFFAIR LAST EVENING

ANNUAL JUNIOR-SENIOR PROM OF GREENCASTLE HIGH SCHOOL HELD IN VOCATIONAL BUILDING THURSDAY

OVER 200 ARE PRESENT

Junior-Senior Prom Proves Jolly Affair—Building Decorated as a Sunken Garden—Old Gold Serenaders Furnish Music

The Annual Junior-Senior Prom of Greencastle High School, which took place in the Vocational Building last evening proved to be the biggest and jolliest social success of the year. About two hundred and twenty-five people attended the prom including visitors, school board, faculty and junior and senior classes.

The gym was most artistically decorated as a sunken garden. The whole dance floor was surrounded by a stone wall. Branches of trees overhanging this stone wall on all sides. At each entrance two Old English lanterns were hung. Two large green Japanese lanterns shed light on the dance floor and at times a blue spotlight played upon the dancers. On the north side of the floor a cozy little nook arranged about a playing fountain afforded a place of refuge for those persons who did not dance.

After the couples arrived they were allowed to choose their own tables. On each table there was a yellow candle and candle holder. When everyone was seated, the waiters and waitresses brought on the first course, consisting of chicken salad, potato chips, sandwiches and olives. The first dance was between the first and second courses and after the second course of ice cream and cake, the second dance began. Following the second dance a take-off on the faculty was given by Herschel Gross and Edward Taylor. During this interval, also, the Junior Class presented a leather notebook to Mr. Thomas for his kind supervision of the construction of the decorations. Next followed the third and fourth dances at which Margarite Ann Inman, bursting forth from a huge rose, sang the popular song "Only a Rose." The fifth and sixth dances ensued, followed by a specialty number by Bill Blanchard and his Old Gold Serenaders, featuring the High School Quartet in "The Song of the Bayou."

All the people who did not dance were given the chance to play games upon the stand at the east end of the Gym. It is rumored that some of the teachers held a checker contest, but the winner has not yet been announced officially.

After the quartet had sung, the seventh and eighth dances ended the gala affair with a big flourish. Everybody went home satisfied that this year's prom was bigger and better than ever before.

Although this beautiful entertainment was made possible through the cooperation of the business men of Greencastle, faculty and student body. The decorations were put up by the following committee: Charles Russell Brown, Chairman, Mary Gregg Bruner, Virginia Mathes, William McGaughey and Edward Taylor. Mary Louise Kocher, Vera Mae Knauer, Audra Chenoweth and Paul Jones had charge of the invitations and printing of the programs.

The delightful refreshments were due to the efforts of Charlotte Etter, Elizabeth Maxfield and Benjamin Jones.

All the miscellaneous tasks were taken care of by Cletic Dillinger and Mary Rose Harlan.

Eugene Early took charge of the financial end. Bill Blanchard and His Old Gold Serenaders provided the delightful music for the dancers.

Back of all the support these people gave lies the generous support given to the Junior Class by the manual (Please Turn to Page 3)

FRED KEMPER SUICIDES IN CAPITOL CITY

FORMER GREENCASTLE RESIDENT KILLS SELF THURSDAY IN INDIANAPOLIS—RESIDED HERE UNTIL TWENTY FIVE YEARS AGO—WILL BE BURIED HERE SATURDAY

Fred Kemper, of Indianapolis, former Greencastle resident, will be buried here Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock with the local order of Masons in charge. These arrangements were made by Mr. Kemper before he committed suicide in a downtown hotel in Indianapolis early Thursday morning.

Mr. Kemper was 57 years of age and resided at 3743 Guilford avenue in Indianapolis and was Union station master there. He was left an orphan when a small child and at the age of six years was taken by the late Oscar Reeves, who raised him to manhood. He resided here until about 25 years ago and was employed by H. L. Jackson and worked on Mr. Jackson's transfer truck.

He went to Indianapolis and was first employed at the Big Four freight depot, then held various freight jobs at the Union depot and for years was at the information bureau before he was made union station master.

Employees, unable to get into his hotel room, called the manager and the door was forced. By Kemper's side lay an empty bottle that had contained poison.

Notes to the widow, Mrs. Anna Kemper, named pallbearers, specified the suit in which he wished to be buried and detailed other funeral arrangements.

Deputy Coroner O. H. Bakemeier said Kemper had been dead several hours.

He left his home last Friday, ostensibly on a short vacation and mailed letters to Mrs. Kemper and Stephen Lowery, assistant station master, in which suffering from melancholia was indicated. He was scheduled to return to duty at Union Station Wednesday night.

CITY COUNCIL VOTES TO BUY A ROAD ROLLER

CITY COUNCIL HOLDS SPECIAL SESSION THURSDAY NIGHT TO CONSIDER BIDS TO FURNISH ROLLER TO CITY

BIDS ARE OPENED TUESDAY

Bond Issue Will Not Be Necessary For Purchase of Machinery—7 Ton Roller to Cost $2,400 And Old Roller

At a called meeting of the city council of the city Greencastle held in City Hall Thursday night the council voted to purchase a Huber, 7-ton gasoline road roller. The roller is to be equipped with a Waukesha 43 horse power motor and is for the use of the city street department. The machine is to be equipped with a blade and scarifier.

The roller will cost the city $2,450 F. O. B. the factory and also the old steam roller that the street department has been using for the past several years. According to announcement made by Mayor W. L. Denman this price is $700 lower than the price offered by any other concern for a roller of the same weight.

It is probable that the city will be able to purchase the machinery without having to sell a bond issue. There is a sum of money in the city treasury from the state gasoline tax that is sufficient to pay for the roller and the council have decided to use that to pay for the roller. It was thought at first that a bond issue might be necessary.

The council received bids for the roller at their regular meeting Tuesday night, but it was voted to consider them further at the informal session held Thursday night. Five companies made offers to the city, and had representatives present at the meeting Tuesday.

LONE STAR MILL IN NO ACCIDENT DRIVE FOR JUNE

CEMENT PLANT TO AGAIN JOIN INDUSTRY IN NATION-WIDE PROGRAM FOR SAFETY

Joining with cement plants throughout America for the fifth annual drive on accidents during the month of June, the Lone Star Cement Company, Indiana, Incorporated, is making an effort to operate throughout the month without an injury, even of a minor nature, to a single employee. The June no-accident campaign, held annually at the height of the production season, has resulted in amazing reductions in accidents throughout the various mills according to R. J. Elledge, superintendent of the local mill, and every effort is being made to completely organize the plant for a record safety effort.

The Portland Cement Association, of which the Lone Star Cement Company, Indiana, Incorporated, is a member, is directing the international general program with the co-operation of national and state labor departments and safety organizations. Every man in the local mill is being enrolled in a no-accident league to support the drive, and departmental enthusiasm is reported to be at a high pitch. According to Mr. Elledge, the local plant has always been a staunch supporter of safety work, but hopes are entertained that the June drive will serve to establish the mill in an even more prominent place among the 160 plants competing throughout this country, Canada, Mexico and Cuba.

A local safety committee composed of members from each department has been appointed to direct the safety activity during the month. Starting June 1, a newly designed safety flag presented by the Portland Cement Association will be raised over the mill, and this flag will continue to fly for as long as the plant continues to operate without loss of time due to accident. The flag will be displayed in a downtown window of some local merchant prior to June 1 when the campaign will start.

Superintendent Elledge stated today that every effort will be made to keep the flag flying until it falls apart. "The spirit of the men is keen for the campaign," he states, "and I believe that this year's effort will result in even a finer achievement than has been recorded for our industry."

ESCAPE PLOT DISCOVERED AT BLOOMINGTON JAIL

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., May 15.—An attempt by prisoners to dig their way out of the jail was discovered today by Sheriff Ray Stephens. A hole more than a foot wide and 3 feet deep was found to have been dug down under the outer wall of the county jail, and evidences that a window had been tampered with were seen.

The sheriff set men to work today to repair damage done by the prisoners. The digging had been going on for several days, it is believed a steel wire was the only implement which the sheriff could find that might have been used in the digging process.

Although it is not known what prisoners were responsible for the attempted jail delivery, suspicion is directed toward two men who face serious charge in circuit court.

INSPECTION OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS MADE THURSDAY

ASSISTANT STATE SCHOOL OFFICIAL VISITS GREENCASTLE YESTERDAY—GRADE SCHOOLS NOW BEING COMMISSIONED

John Hussey, assistant state school inspector of the State Education department, was in Greencastle Thursday and visited all the Greencastle schools. He was very complimentary in his remarks concerning the school system here.

The high school which was a first class commission in the North Central Association of colleges and secondary schools, will again maintain its commission. The school maintains its commission this year due to the new library which has been installed on the second floor of the building in the large room formerly occupied by the science department. The library is in charge of the librarian, which is also a requirement for a first class commission.

A system of commissioning grade schools has been inaugurated by the state educational department this year and Supt. Warren J. Yount is confident that most of the grade schools will receive a continuous commission. The state has a standard of three commissions, first, continuous and conditional. Since this is the first year of the new program no first class commissions are being issued in the state but continuous commissions will be given and with suggestions for receiving a first rating. This gives all schools an incentive to work for.

If any of the schools here do not receive a continuous commission it will be due to the condition of the walls and decorating.

MORROW SEEKS REPEAL OF THE U. S. DRY LAW

OPENS CAMPAIGN FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION TO THE SENATE IN SPEECH FAVORING REPEAL OF EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT

NEWARK, N. J., May 16.—Dwight W. Morrow, opening his campaign last night for Republican nomination to the United States Senate from New Jersey, declared himself in favor of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Devoting to the prohibition question almost all of his 3,000-word address he asserted that if elected to the Senate, he would be prepared to vote for a resolution submitting to the states a constitutional amendment which would restore to them the power to determine their policy toward the liquor traffic.

So long as the eighteenth amendment is in the constitution, he said he favored "generous appropriations" for enforcement of the statutes enacted under it, but he urged the use of such Federal appropriations to keep liquor from coming into the United States and to prevent interstate traffic in it.

The saloon, Mr. Morrow said, must not come back.

But, he declared, a "wholly unregulated liquor traffic" has grown up, for which one group blames the law, and another group the disobedience to law, "and it is not in such a spirit that a solution will be found."

The Democratic Women's club will meet Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the assembly room of the Court House.

COP BATTLES FOUR GUNMEN CAPTURES TWO

INDIANAPOLIS OFFICER INTERRUPTS HOLDUP OF DRUG STORE —TAKES TWO GUNMEN TO JAIL

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 16.—(INS)—For single-handed charging four gunmen whom he surprised holding up a drug store, and for capturing two of them and putting the other two to flight, Patrolman William G. Ennis was to be cited for bravery in action by Chief of Police Jerry E. Kinney today.

Ennis' captives held in jail here today were:

Joseph Hawkins, 23, of 914 Ashland avenue.

Donald Nye, 18, alias Ralph Woodard, of 914 Ashland avenue.

The policeman fired several shots one of which he believed wounded one of the fugitives.

It all happened when Patrolman Ennis spied four men in a coupe driving slowly past the Grahn Pharmacy at 13th street and Cornell avenue just before midnight. The officer grew suspicious of the men and dropped into some high weeds behind a billboard to watch them. Two of the men got out of their car, passed the drug store, then re-entered their machine.

As the gunmen's auto started away Ennis commandeered the car of Mike Gray, negro, who was passing, and ordered him to follow the first car. After trailing the gunmen for some time, they returned to the Grahn store and three of the gunmen got out and entered the store with drawn guns. The officer wanted to capture the man left waiting at the car and told Gray to drive up slowly. The negro got excited, however, and ran over the curb, spilling Ennis who had been standing on the running board, right into the drug store entrance. But Ennis had his gun out and in a rapid swirl of action that didn't take thirty seconds, had collared two of the alleged bandits, probably wounded another, and put two of them to flight.

Police were seeking the escaped pair today.

LAKE COUNTY CAR GOES INTO DITCH

A large touring car driven by Joseph B. Kyle of Crown Point, Indiana, a deputy sheriff for Lake County, was slightly damaged when it went into the ditch in north Greencastle this morning. Kyle was taking a number of prisoners to the Indiana State Prison at Putnamville when the accident occurred.

Another large car being driven by another Lake county official, which was following the car driven by Kyle, narrowly missed crashing into the rear of the car that went into the ditch. There were ten prisoners in the two cars. Eight of the prisoners were being taken to the penal farm, and the other two were women who had been sentenced to the Indiana Women's prison at Indianapolis.

Kyle says that he drove his car into the ditch to avoid striking a truck which was stuck in a ditch on the highway. No one was injured. The car was taken to the Moffett Buick company where it was repaired.

OFFICIAL DIES IN AN ATTEMPT TO HOLD YOUTH

BLOOMINGTON YOUTH HELD IN DAVIESS COUNTY JAIL, FOLLOWING DEATH OF TOWN MARSHAL

WAS FLEEING ARREST

Dead Man Was the Second Town Marshal of Little Town To Come to Grief in Past Six Weeks

WASHINGTON, Ind., May 16.—(INS)—Cecil Gilliatt, 28, of Bloomington, Ind., was arrested here today and lodged in the Daviess county jail pending a grand jury investigation of the death late last night of Charles Conaughton, 68, town marshal of Montgomery, six miles east of here.

Conaughton died suddenly when he fell or was knocked off the running board of Gilliatt's automobile while he was trying to arrest the youth.

Coroner W. O. McKittrick was to conduct a postmortem examination at noon today to determine the cause of the marshal's death.

Conaughton was the second town marshal of Montgomery who came to grief within the last six weeks. On March 24th Tom Fisher who was Conaughton's predecessor, was shot in the chest and seriously wounded by two yeggs whom he resisted when they tried to kidnap him preparatory to breaking into the Montgomery bank. Fisher has recovered and was present last night when Conaughton died.

Young Gilliatt who is said to be a brother of P. C. Gilliatt, manager of the Graham Hotel at Bloomington, Ind., was alleged to have caused a disturbance at a dance at Montgomery last night. He was alleged to have been intoxicated.

CONVICTED OF USING MAILS TO DEFRAUD

LULA E. LEUCHT OF MAYWOOD IS CONVICTED IN FEDERAL COURT OF USING MAILS TO DEFRAUD IN CONNECTION WITH MATRIMONIAL SCHEME

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 16.—(INS)—Mrs. Lula E. Leucht of Maywood, Ind., a divorcee, and mother of a 17-year old boy, today stood convicted by a jury in federal court here of using the mails to defraud in an alleged swindling matrimonial mail scheme. She forced a possible maximum prison sentence of five years.

The government developed testimony showing that Mrs. Leucht had a sparkling letter writing ability that drew dollars by mail from men with whom she got into touch through a matrimonial bureau.

Two of her victims, Otto Closkey of Kildeer, S. Dak., a hardbitten western cattle rancher, and Clarence Drewoff, a Detroit business man, testified for the government. Closkey said that Mrs. Leucht told him she had a farm near Greenfield and asked him to ship her a carload of cattle to fatten on her farm. He admitted mailing her $175 instead.

Drewoff testified he sent Mrs. Leucht a total of $350 and that he lost another $300 when he consulted a gypsy fortune teller about the case. The gypsy picked his pockets while he was showing her a photograph of Mrs. Leucht he said.

U. S. District Attorney George Jeffrey read three of Mrs. Leucht's letters in court. Some of the passages sent the jury, judge and spectators into roars of laughter.

Mrs. Leucht declared that her relations with both men were purely of a business nature.

FORMER GREENCASTLE BOY WINNER IN CONTEST

Indian stores have a never-failing appeal to boys. Warren Confer reviewed one, and won a $1 prize in the Indianapolis Star's thirteenth book review contest. He is 13 years old, lives at 2614 north Capitol avenue, Indianapolis, and is an 8th pupil in school No. 36. Here is what he wrote: "A Son of the Navajos," by James Schultz, is the story of an old man told to the author.

Wampin, who is the old man, and Lone Rock, his brother, were Navajo Indians. When young they were captured by Tewa Indians. The brothers have hard times with their enemies among the Tewa. Lone Rock is killed in a fight against the Navajos. Wampin is elected war chief of the Tewa, and through him a lasting peace is made between the Tewa and the Navjos.

This book tells about Indian life on the Rio Grande river.

Warren Confer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Confer, and is a nephew of Ralph Confer of Greencastle. The Carl Confers formerly lived on North Jackson street, Greencastle, and Warren attended the first Ward school.

SYNOPSIS

David Wade, robbed while drunk by O'Shane, is cured for by Stella Blackney, secretly the wife of O'Shane, whom she loathes and fears. She appeals to Wade to take her away, following her mother's death, for by their bargain O'Shane was then to claim his marital rights. Putting her plight, Wade flees with her to the South Sea island of Motogara where they find Mollie, a half-caste girl, who is attracted by Wade. Stella, now loving Wade, is afraid the half-caste will win him away since she herself is not free to marry him. They quarrel about remaining on the island, but make up. Mollie's father is taken ill and sends for them.

"Ah! You are here at last!" she breathed as Stella came in range of the yellow light and went down; and the words seemed to vibrate as a violin-string vibrates, so tense were they.

"We came at once," murmured David. "Is he any better?"

The half-caste pointed to a banked bull against the side.

"He is just the same," said Mollie in her breathless, tense tone.

Stella stepped to the bank-bed, David with her. Melrose lay outstretched on his back, his eyes closed and his breathing so slight that at first it seemed he no longer lived.

"Oh! it's not as bad as that," said David.

lived. Very old he looked as he lay there; his face was pinched and transversely wrinkled; the accustomed bronze of health was replaced by a purplish tinge; the grey of his hair seemed almost white.

"It was just after we had tea," said Mollie. "He was all right till then. He had been diving all through the afternoon tide, and there was nothing the matter with him. Nothing! As we got up from tea, he staggered, said something about his heart, and collapsed. With the help of the boys I got him below and into bed." She looked a little wildly from Stella to Wade.

"What is it, do you think? Do you know anything about doctoring? I have been trying to look it up in the medicine-chest book. See, here is the book! Perhaps you can find it. I looked and looked; but there are so many diseases! She choked back a sob, and addressed herself to Stella in a whisper.

"He sent for you at once. He has been dreadfully afraid you would not come quickly. Everything depended on your coming, he said. Why? Why? Is it that you know the cure?" She gripped the white girl's arms and looked strainingly into her face. Then, at a sound from the bank she released them and knelt beside her father.

Melrose's eyes had opened uncertainly, wearily, and his lips were moving.

"Has—she—come?" The sound was uncertain as the opening of his eyes.

"Yes—yes!" said Mollie eagerly. "See, dear, she is waiting. How do you feel now, Dad? Is the pain in your heart gone? What can I get for you? Dad! Dad! Do you feel better?"

"Some—brandy." At once she got it and gave it to him, with one hand holding the glass to his lips and with the other raising his head a little.

"That—is—better." He looked at Stella, and the look was a beckon. She went to him, and knelt as Mollie had knelt. As though from a great relief, he sighed, and his hand went out slowly, seeking hers. Stella grasped it. For a moment there was a silence, profound and acute. Mollie and David stood looking down at them. The half-caste was trembling a little.

"It—is—about—Mollie," whispered Melrose; and though the words were low, they were strangely distinct.

"Yes," said Stella. Again there was the silence that was so profound. It made for sense of waiting, omnipresent and menacing.

"I—told—you about her—the day—we met. Mollie—another sip of—that brandy. This old—heart—of mine, m'm—it's—gone back—on—me—a—t last. Thank you, Mollie, my dear. That's better. Mrs. Wade, I took—a liking—to—you—from the start. I reckoned you'd be a good companion for Mollie. What's that?"

On the deck, above had sounded the shuffle of quiet, naked feet. "Only one of the crew-boys, Dad," said Mollie.

"What do they want—to sneak speak about—like that for? Oh, I know! A smile trembled on his lips and in his eyes. "Mrs. Wade!"

"Yes," said Stella, akin to tears.

"And I thought—" He was looking at her now with an anxiousness he had never seen on human face before.

"I—thought—that—if ever the time came that she—she would be alone."

"Don't, Daddy!" came Mollie's voice, crooked and gasping.

"She—will—be pretty well off, m'm. There's this—schooner, and the pearls and—pearl—shell we've got—and twenty—thousand—dollars in the bank. It'll all be hers. And there's—this pearl—shell—better you'd find—anywhere—and it ain't—half worked out yet."

"I—want—to make it clear—she won't be a pauper."

"I can't stand it," came Mollie's whispered voice, addressing David. "I can't! Is there nothing you can do? Are we to stand here and see—and see him—?"

"Oh, it's not as bad as that!" said David encouragingly, though without conviction of tone.

"Be brave!" he whispered and took her arm comfortingly in his.

If Melrose heard, he made no sign.

"I don't want her—to be—with-out a friend—alone. She's—had—too—much of that kind—of life. It—ain't right. I—can't bear to—think of it! I—just can't!"

Again there was that pause for the gaining of strength. The shore insect once more buzzed harshly into the lamp-glass, then flew up the stairway and out. From outside came no sound, it was as though it were the sea, the world itself, was listening.

"So—I—thought—maybe—you'd—be—willing—to—look—after—her."

"Oh!" Stella exclaimed, and the sudden feeling of cold came to her. "You could go—into partnership."

Melrose hurried on as well as he could, and the anxiousness of his expression more intense than ever. "You—and your—husband—with the—trading. It'd be—profitable. Very—profitable."

His voice became to Stella scarcely more than a sound. A chaos of emotion had besieged her consciousness. Mollie in her care! Mollie thrust out right into the society of David! It could not be! It was too terrible! It was some horrible jest! The old man did not know what he was saying! He had asked her to take Mollie into her care!

She shrank back a little from the bank. Melrose was no longer a kindly old man, anxious for his daughter's welfare. He was a monster, intent on making sure Stella's happiness would be destroyed.

"You're not going to pass out so easily as all that, Melrose!" David was saying. "You are going to look after your daughter yourself." And Mollie was kneeling beside Stella and looking at her father and speaking to him tenderly in a tone which had in it more than a hint of hysteria.

Melrose's eyes were still full upon Stella.

"What—do—you—think—m'm?" And his grip of Stella's hand tightened with surprising force, and his lips quivered as the lips of a child quiver to fear of a disappointment.

"I—I—" Stella began. She didn't know what to say. Ideas and words to express ideas were gone from her. She looked away from the old man, looked round the room, at its queer ornaments, at the charts in their copper cases, and none of them did she see distinctly. A haze was before her eyes, and her heart was thumping, bumping. A fear came to her that she was about to faint. With her free hand she rubbed her brow and her eyes. She looked again at Melrose.

And then suddenly she felt better. The whirl of chaotic emotion stilled and was gone. In its place came pity, warm and deep and surging—pity for Melrose. He was not a monster! He was merely an old man, a dying old man, who loved his daughter as he loved no other thing, whose last thoughts were for that daughter's happiness and security; who feared to die, not because he feared death, but because of what his dying might mean for her.

She took his other hand.

"What—do—you—think, m'm?" he said again, and his eyes were not so anxious now.

All are surviving her at the time of her death.

She and her husband united with M. P. Church at Clinton Falls in the year 1919 of which she was a faithful worker until she was called away.

During her recent illness her suffering was intense until within a short time before her death.

She was a faithful wife, a devoted mother, a kind neighbor and a true and loyal friend, charitable and benevolent and always willing to sacrifice her own interest for the pleasure of those she loved.

She was patient during her sickness and was ready to go when the Lord called her.

We miss thee from our home dear mother

We miss thee from thy place
A shadow o'er our life is cast,
We miss the sunshine of thy face.

We miss the kind and willing hand
Thy fond and earnest care,
Our home is dark without thee
We miss thee everywhere.

A CARD OF THANKS

There comes a time to us all, no matter how limited may be our temporal circumstances when we can be helpful to our fellow beings; when we can show we can be helpful and exercise a vital appreciation of our relationship and concern for the afflicted of our race by giving in person or by note of sympathy to those who are bereft, words of love and sincerity, which are welded to the heart of those who are affected.

Words are more appreciated and treasured than gold.

We are grateful to say that the funeral and putting away of our dear wife and mother was the nicest and most satisfactory we have ever witnessed. We considered the work of Mr. McCurry ideal and the funeral service by Rev. H. A. Sherrill exceptional and the musical part of the service all that could be asked for. We wish also to remember the service and kindness of the pall-bearers, John Vermillion, Calvin Tuttle, Lonzo Heady, Thomas Johnson, Homer Slavens and Wallace Spencer, also all that contributed flowers in mourning.

"Cohens and Kellys in Scotland"
Here For Big Laugh Show

The last Cohen-and-Kelly picture will be seen at the Voncastle Theatre tonight and Saturday with more laughs than there are Scotch jokes.

"The Cohens and Kellys in Scotland" is the fourth and funniest of Universal's hilarious series involving the adventures of the two best-loved and laughed-at filmland families.

Kilt-clad and comical, they stumble into a host of uproarious experiences culminating in the determination to commit suicide because their fortunes have been lost. How this works out is the comedy high-spot of the production.

"The Cohens and Kellys in Scotland" again unites the original Cohen and Kelly, George Sidney and Charlie Murray who celebrate their reunion by topping all their previous efforts.

Vera Gordon and Kate Price portray the respective wives.

"King of the Kongo" wild animal and talking serial and a gang comedy will add pleasing variety to Friday-Saturday program at the Voncastle.

GRANADA
"Arizona Kid" Outdoor Talkie Arrives

Action, romance and suspense are the triple keynotes of "The Arizona Kid," which opens today at the Granada Theatre and playing through Saturday, which brings the popular Warner Baxter again to the speaking screen in the best performance of his sombered career.

From all appearances, this picture will surpass both "In Old Arizona" and "Romance of Rio Grande," the two productions which elevated Baxter to first place in outdoor romantic roles. With every bit of the film taken on the exact locale of the story, "The Arizona Kid" sets a new record in screen history.

A sporting youth talking comedy, topics and Paramount News completes the Friday-Saturday bill at the Granada.
